The Democrats of North Carolina in convention as sembled, considering the occasion, a proper one for the re-assertion of the well defined and time honored principles that bind them together as a party, do resolvo—First, That we are for a rigid construction of the constitution of the United States as a grant of limited powers, for an independent treasury, and against a United States Bank, for a tariff for revenue, and against a tariff for protection, for economy in the administration of the federal government, and against extravagant expenditures, for an early payment of the public debt, and against the payment of stale and unfounded claims.

Second, That we are devoted to the union of the States, and desirelts preservation by a strict and faithful observance of the constitution, and by doing equal and impartial justice to all its parts.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Boston, May 15, 1852.

In the Methedist Conference to day, in the case of the Rev Mr. Inskep, found guilty of contumecious conduct by the Obio Conference, the decision was reversed by a vote of 80 to 62.

The appeal case of the Rev. J. N. McCabe was assigned for Monday, to be tried with closed doors. The charges and chief.

received into its customs union by the 1st January, 1854 on the one hand, and Prussia, with the present Zollverein by the 1st January, 1854, on the other." The other plan and the other States that may have been received into i by the 1st January, 1854 on the other." The other plan is called a "Treaty of commercial union" between the same States, and is intended to succeed the former after a certain length of time. The drafts of these two projects have not been published, and their details are not known, as the conferences were always secret.

The closing protocol of the conferences, which has been published, contains declarations of the plenipotentiaries present, in reference to the above projects, and the means of carrying them out.

Austria declares her readiness to adopt them unchanged or to take them as the basis of negotiation with Prussia and the other States of the Zollverein, but only considers herself bound by this declaration in case the negotiation be commenced before the conferences of the States of the Zollverein, at Berlin, have renewed that union. If the matter be not taken up before the provisions of the Zollverein are re-established, she will consider herself released from it.

The plenipotentiaries of Bavaria. Saxeny, Wurtenberg, Baden, the Grand Duchy of Hessia, Hessia Electorate, Nassau, and Hesse Homburg, reserving the ratification of their governments, accept these projects either unchanged or as the basis of further negotiation; and declare that they will present and advocate them at the Berlin conferences, that the union with Austria be, if possible, accomplished simultaneously with renewing or modifying the Zollverein.

Austria and the above mentioned States also declare their readiness to accept the proposition drawn up by the conferences at Dreaden, and afterwards laid before the Diet at Frankfort, for the promotion of commerce and commercial communication.

The Plenipotentiary of Brunswick makes a declaration, in which he appropriate of the projects in the villed and the proposition of the projects in the villed of the projects in the villed of the projects in the villed of the projects and the villed of the projects in the villed of the projects in t connecraces at Dreaden, and afterwards laid before the Diet at Frankfort, for the promotion of commerce and commercial communication.

The Plenipotentiary of Brunswick makes a declaration, in which he approves in general of the projects, and is willing to accept them as the basis of further negotiation; but on account of the geographical situation of that State, between Prussia and Hanover, cannot take any definite step at present.

The Planipotentiary of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg declares the readiness of his government to continue the negotiations for the commercial union of Austria with Germany, but cannot adopt any final resolutions, except in connection with Prussia and Hanover, with which States Oldenburg is in close commercial union.

The Plenipotentiary of the "free town of Frankfort" expresses the readiness of his government to continue negotiations in connection with the other States of the Zollverein, as also to accept the propositions of the Dresden Conferences.

The Plenipotentiary of the "free Hanse Towns" signs.

Colliverein, as also to accept the propositions of the Dresden Conferences.

The Plenipotentiary of the "free Hanse Towns" signs the protocol only to denote his presence at the conferences, but not as approving the result of them.

Count Buol Schaueastein, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, delivered an address at the close of the conferences, in which he expressed the intention of the Austrian government to continue zealously its efforts for commercial union with Germany, which he said would be the best guarantee for permanent peace, and for the general welfare of all the German States.

It is said that particular instructions have been sent to the Austrian representatives at all the Southern German courts, to impress upon those courts the desire of Austria that the subject of her commercial union with Germany be seriously taken up by their Plenipotentiaries at the Berlin Conferences.

Prussia will, no doubt, oppose the Austrian projects that the surject or her commercial union with Germany be seriously taken up by their Plenipotentiaries at the Berlin Conferences.

Prussia will, no doubt, oppose the Austrian projects with all her influence; but the fact that Austria has gained completely Bavaria, Saxony, Wurtemberg, Baden, Nassau, and the Heesias, which, after Frussia, are the most important States of the Zollverein, speaks much for her final success.

A fresh indication that there has been a change in the friendly feelless of this government towards that of France, since the death of Prince Solwarzenberg, is a leading article of the ministerial Presse, of yesterday, on the telegraphic news from Paris of the 224 inst, that the French government had published a declaration contradicting the rumors of an intended change in the present state of things, on the occasion of the May fee, and stating that such a determination, if its necessity should appear, would only take place by the initiative of the authorities competent, and the vote of the people; and that if the troops should greet the President as Emperor, on that occasion, the empire would not be restored an hour coner.

The Presse treats this in a very specing way, "With

If the troops should greet the Fresident as Emperor, on that occasion, the empire would not be restored an hour reconer.

The Presse treats this in a very sneering way. "With the exemplary discipline of the French army," it says, "it can hardly be supposed that such a demonstration would take place, unless it were wished as a refreshing episode. However that may be, the chosen of the nation has as yet no reason to fear the decision of the election urn. This urn has already twice brought him good luck, and it is an old German proverb, that, of all good things, there are three.

"The profit that Germany should draw from the present state of things in France, is very plain. It should be in the desire of all parties for a closer union, for removing all selfish and local objects, and holding firmer and nearer together. As yet, the call to this end has been but inffectual. Shall it be the case also in future? We wish the contrary, and we can never cease to hope it."

The Vienna papers say that there is a work in the press, by Görgey, which will appear in a few days, entitled. "My Life and Actions in Hungary, in the years 1843 and 1849."

A Munich paper has two leading articles on the "Reconstraint and is thought to the received in the press."

A Munich paper has two leading articles on the "Refugees in England," and "Kinkal in America," in which the object of the exited democrate is represented to be the "universal introduction of the guillotine." &c. The democratic "People's Band" in America, is particularly mentioned as a dangerous association for Europe.

The Presse of this city remarks on this subject, that though "there mad caps" are not supported by the American government, yet a collective protest on the part of the European Powers "could do no harm."

The sisters of Kossuth, who were liberated from prison some days ago, and his mother, who has been under palice surveillance at Pesth, have obtained permission to emigrate to America, and intend to set out about the first of May.

irst of May.

Emigration in general seems to be still increasing

Hundreds of respectable families are leaving Hungary, Bohemia, Moravia, and even the mountain districts of Tyrol and Styra are sending out great numbers. Such emigration from Austria was never seen before. From other parts of Germany it seems to be greater. On one day, (the 15th instant.) 6,000 emigrants left the single root of Essential Communications.

day, (the 15th instant.) 0 000 emigrants left the single port of Bremen.

The American Legation here has daily applications from individuals and companies, to know if there is no means of getting assistance to America. By far the greater part who would emigrate, are detained here by want of means. In some parts of Austria the authorities require every person to show 200 florins in cash, before he can get the permission to emigrate. In other parts a certificate is required from the American Legation that the person will be received in America. Of the young men only such are permitted to emigrate as are already free from military duty. Many families are thus detained from emigrating having sons in the army.

Several large steamboats are building here in the American style, to run between Vienna and Posth.

The plenipotentiaries of Bayaria, Saxony, Wurtemberg, Baden, and the two Hessias, have all received decorations from the government. Yours, &c., J. C. C.

The Close of Holy Week-Outrageous Conduct of a French Officer to an American-Spirited Retort of the American. and Spirited Conduct of Mr. Case, the American Charge. An event recently occurred here, of an outrageou character, which has created a good deal of excitement and unpleasant feeling among the American residents as well as the foreigners generally, now in Rome. The ceremonies of the Holy Week closed with the benediction of the Pope, on Easter Sunday, in the great square of St. Peter's. Vast as it is, it was filled, on that occasion, with an immense crowd, among whom were probably to be found representatives from almost every probably to be found representatives from almost every country in the world. The military came on the ground in battle order, making an imposing show, and, with the spectators, formed a concourse estimated at seventy thousand. It is customary, at Rome, on all great religious occasions, upon the approach of the Pope, the elevation of the Host, and similar ceremonies, for all persons who are present to uncover and bend their heads, as a mark of respect. It happened that one of our countrymen, Mr. Innes, an artist of much merit, was standing near the colounade where the Swiss Guards are stationed, when the roll of the drums announced the appearance of his Holiness. A French officer, who was by his side, observing that he remained with his head covered, ordered him in an offensive and insulting manner, to take off his hat, and immediately drew his sword and knocked it from his head. Mr. Innes replied by a blow with his came, receiving in return a sword-cut, which he repaid with a still better stroke. The officer called for gendarmes, and committed Mr. Innes to their custody, by whom he was dragged to prison. The facts of the case were communicated, with a little delay as possible, to Mr. Case, the American Charge d'alfaires, who immediately demanded of the government the liberation of Mr. Innes; engaging at the same time to be responsible for his appearance, in the event of investigation and triat. He was informed, in reply, that his countryman was in the hands of the French authorities, and that to them application must be made for his meace. Mr. Oas rejoined that he know pothing of the French authorities, and that to them application must be made for his meace. Mr. Oas rejoined that he know pothing of the French authorities in Rome; that he was country in the world. The military came on the ground

Fashiors for May.

[From Le Follet.]

Before calling the attention of our readers to bonnets, which now form a prominent feature in describing lands, we must notice two very becoming and fashionable caps.—the first, the Charlotte Corday, made of deep indented blonde, falling over bunshes of roses. The second we have been permitted to mane the Psyche; it is graceful, modest, and youthful, composed of black grippure over black lace, with a wreath of green ribbon foliage encircling a beautiful rose. We must now pass on to the bonnets. The first is a capote of bonillonnes, violet tulle, with loops aeross each boullonne, of very narrow vlotet and straw-colored rubans-passementerie (these ribbons are a great novelty, and are as delicate and light as game). Two rows of gray passementerie, embroidered with straw, are slightly quilled over the bouillonnes of tulle; one across the crown, and another on the curtain. The inside of the front, which is wide, is trimmed with violets of three shades. The capote papillonnes of blonde and white gauze ribbon. There are three rows of papillons of blonde, and consequently three bands of gauze ribbon. A broad white taffetas ribbon passes over the crown in the style of a fanohon, and forms the long broad strings. On one side the ribbon is concealed by a tuft of double narcissus and long grass; three rows of blonde and gauze ribbon fall from the back of the crown, covering the curtain.

An exquisite capote of pink gauze, of blases slightly gathered, trimmed round the edge with a large ruche à la vieille, formed of pink gauze and blonde; a large double rose ornaments one ear.

Another of the blue taffetas, and crepe lisse in bouffantes, with rosaces of straw at equal distances. A bouffante of taffetas round the outer edge of the front, and of crepe lisse inside with rosaces of straw. Double daisles encircled in bouillonnes of tuile round the face. This pretty capote loses much in describing; it must be seen to be properly understoed.

A capote of lilac colored taffetas, with an edge of lilac and white gauze ribbon; the lining is composed of alternate blases of spotted taffetas, with an edge of lilac is ornamented with a large bunch of Parma violets. Cap of spotted tulle, with a bunch of violets on one side, and long floating ribbons on the other.

A pink bonnet, composed of tulle and taffetas; the edge being of tulle, with narrow fringed ribbon fastening it to the bouilkonne of taffetas. The front, towards the crown, has four buffantes of taffetas fastened with agraves of fringed passementerie. The crown is three puffs of taffetas and blonde. Pink and black poppies, gray follage, and green buds, mixed with blonde, with a bow of the taffetas and blonde. Pink and black poppies, gray follage, and green buds, mixed with blonde, form the cap.

There is no decided rule for the number or width of flounces; fancy alone regulates this trimming.

Enyaderes, plaids, chinese, printed foulards, and flowered taffetas, are all in great demand.

A very elegant dress, called the Seraphina, is made with a double skirt; the first white, with three brochees bands, the second of blue taffetas, with white designs, rounded in front or habler marquise, or of silver or gold lams, over white gree de tours.

The gilet sénateur is composed of white moire, quité ligh, with two rows of gold hanging, buttons. The lace and embroidered muslin waistcoats are lined with white, ink, and blue tafletas.

The new form of sleeve is the manche tailladée, or slached sleeve. A small cuff fastens the five pointed angles, botween each of which the white under-sleeve protrudes. This has the advantage of noveity, but the open, rounded, square, or mousquetaire sleeve, with open sleeves of Brussels lace, or Valenciennes or English point, are much more elegant and preferable for summer tollette. The most successful novelty of the season is la mode for lace mantes. Imagine this mante of the finest black, in beautiful designs, forming a rounded soart behind, descending only to the waist; the ends in front are cometimes long, sometimes short and narrow, and are tied in a knot at the waist, descending to the knees, or carried behind and fastened like the Bubarry mantelets. A hood is added, which forms a double pelevine over the shoulders, or a delightful coliflure madone when thrown over the head. Some are lined with thin colored taffetas. Then come the mantilles Fontange, or Dubarry, trimmed behind with deep flounces reaching the front of the arm from which a much narrower trimming continues down the front.

The pardessus Maintenon, of violet taffetas, with three deep flounces of Chantilly lace; it has sleeves hidden by the lace. That which gives this pardessus the stamp of elegance, is the searf, embroidered with beautiful passementeric and trimmed with heep falling over the pardessus and forming the fourth flounce. The ends are a lantique in the style of Louis XIV.

The mante peried out Bresil, of green taffetas, parily embroidered and partly trimmed with platted ribbon, edged with deep lounces reached and partly trimmed with platted ribbon, edged with deep lounce in the day of the mante are richly embroidered, with transled of the mante a

The petit manteau vert-vert, of blue and black glace, forming a double rabat, under which the small openings for the arms are concealed. This manteau is ornamented with four or five rows of velvet and satin galons, shaded in the two colors of the silk. On the edge of each rabat is a rich blue and black fringe. A hood a la vieille, gathered at the throat, is also trimmed with galons and fringe. When more elegance and richness are required, the vert-vert is trimmed with two or three rows of Chantilly lace.

The mantille priora forming a round, without a seam on the shoulders or back, with a flat hood. The ornament consists of five rows of narrow black velvet in chinoise scollops: velvet leaves are applique in each scollop, and edged with fright. The front is cut with revers.

Caps are worn very small, scarcely covering the top of the head. We have seen two extremely pretty ones—the first is of black net, with two rows of blonde falling one over the other; a broad blue ribbon is tied round with long floating ends; three roses, one white and two pink, are placed under the lace on the right side, and one dark rose with long ends of blue ribbon on the other. The other cap is also of lace, of the same form; the trimming is different, being a plaid ribbon plaited en fichu, with the point failing over the knot of hair. The bouquets are composed of mixed flowers, combining all the color s in the ribbon, and producing an extremely agreeable ensemble.
